English Boat Was Five Minutes Behind--It Look- ed Like a Procession To Those Along The Shore.

3 P. M.—RELIANCE WINS BY A MARGIN OF FIVE MINUTES. THE RUN HOME WAS A PROCESSION WITH THE SHAMROCK FAR IN THE REAR.

(Special By Scripps-McRae.)

Highlands, Aug. 22.—In a smart eight-knot wind from the southwest and over a sea as smooth as an inland lake the two cup contenders, Reliance and Shamrock III., went to the starting line this morning to make a second attempt to hold the first race of the series of the American cup. A more perfect day for the race could not be had. Sir Thomas said that the Shamrock will show her worth and it will be a great race. Manager Islen of the Reliance smiled and looked happy.

Crowds Large

The disappointment of the fluke of Thursday seemed only to inspire interest in the race. Both the shores are lined with spectators and also the excursion boats are crowded with anxious enthusiasts. Both yachts started early in tow line for the starting point. At nine o'clock the wind held true at seven knots an hour and an hour later it dropped to five knots. Arriving near the lightship the two boats spread their sails and began maneuvering. The regatta committee finding too much pite the Englishman's efforts stuck there. The racers crossed the line on a starboard tack the Reliance being to the weather of the Shamrock, but behind. As they stood out on the course Captain Barr placed the Reliance high into the wind. By noon the American boat was slowly overlapping the Shamrock and eight minutes later the Reliance took the lead. At twelve-fifteen the wind was blowing nine knots an hour and holding well. The yachts then went on a port tack the Reliance being in the lead by a good margin.

Nearing Outer Mark

1:33.—Both boats are nearing the outer mark and two miles away now. The Reliance is increasing its lead and now has more than enough advantage to overcome the time allowance against her. The Englishman had made a surprising good fight considering the exhibition his boat made Thursday.

Remarkable Fight

It was one of the most remarkable fights to windward ever seen on an American cup course. Once planted on the Shamrock's weather bow the

Shamrock Second

1:57:43.—The Shamrock has just rounded the outer mark.

Four Minute Lead

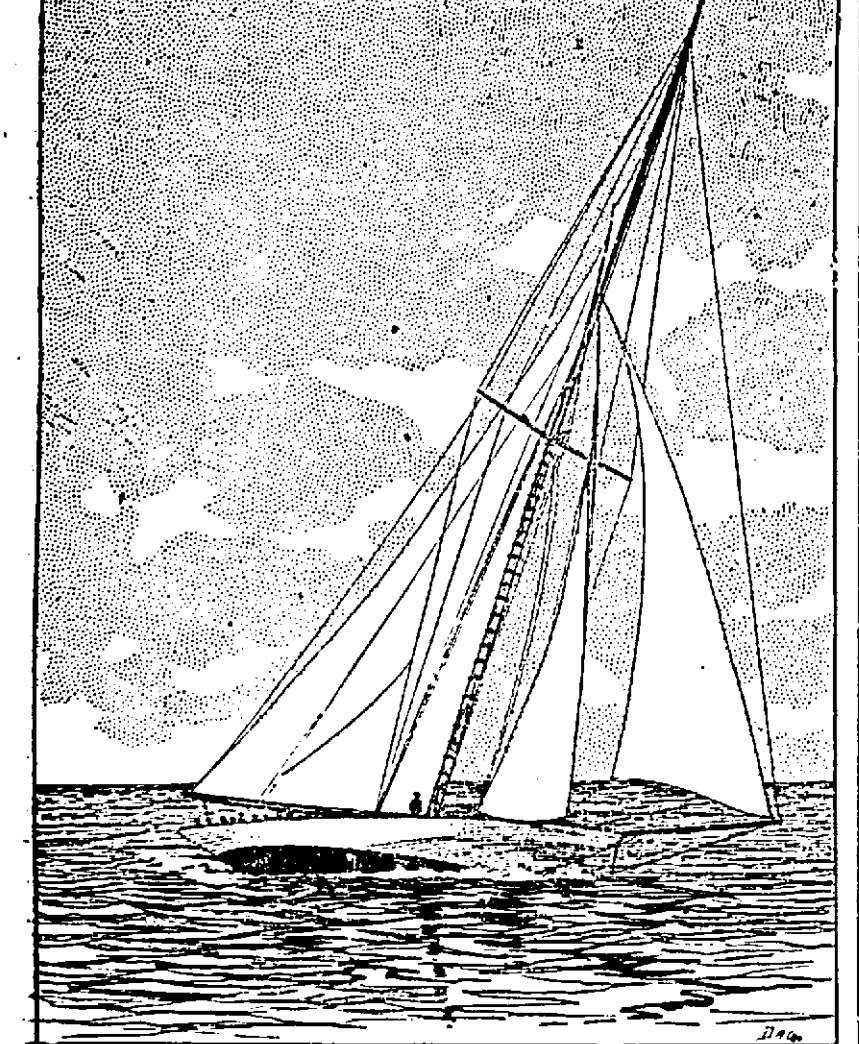

2:15.—Unless the Shamrock is able to gain on the American by over a minute and nineteen seconds she will lose the race. The Reliance is more than holding her own and will win barring accidents or flukes. The American boat leads by over four minutes.

Clever Maneuvering

It is a certainty that the race was won at the start when Captain Barr took the windward of the English boat and held it throughout the entire race. It was a skillful move and cost the Lipton boat the first of the series of cup races.

The next race will be held on Monday and it will be over the same wind to lay the course fifteen miles to the windward and return laid it out from a point east of the lightship.

Boats Are Off

At 11:30 the preparatory gun was fired and both boats started jockeying for the start. At 11:45 the starting gun was fired and the boats crossed the line as follows: Shamrock, 11:45:55; Reliance, 11:45:21.

Starboard Tack

12:42.—The Reliance tacked to the starboard and approached the Shamrock on the opposite tack forcing the Englishman to the port. Boats so close they could exchange words.

Reliance Gaining

12:56.—The wind is still strong at ten knots. Reliance is gaining and has a fair lead being not only to the windward but ahead.

Harbor Crowded

At no race in past years has the attendance been so large as that which witnessed today's race. All the excursion steamers were filled and the Highlands was crowded with people with binoculars who watched the yachts throughout the entire course.

Her Story Involves Many High Officials of Past Days in France.

ALLEGES CHILD BRIDE IS HYPNOTIC VICTIM

Young Wife Declares She Is Compelled by Some Occult Force to Go With Stranger.

Binghamton, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Love and hypnotism played an important part in an arrest made when William Drake of Chicago, a draughtsman and architect, was taken into custody on a warrant issued by Ransome Hill charging him with the abduction of his 15-year-old wife, Rose Hill, by the use of his hypnotic powers. Drake has been visiting friends in Norwich, N. Y., for some time and formed the acquaintance of Mrs. Hill, the "child bride."

Drake is a man of strong magnetic power and is claimed to be an adept in hypnotism. It is charged that Mrs. Hill under his influence was compelled against her will to go with him to Haynes, N. Y., where she was later traced and where an officer went with the warrant for Drake. The officer did not find Drake, but the latter voluntarily surrendered himself to a justice of the peace, denying the charges of hypnotism. Mrs. Hill, however, says she was compelled to follow him by an occult force.

The court ruled that the charges were not applicable, as the sheriff failed to order the mob to disperse, in the name of the state, as required by law.

SOCIETY

A pretty little romance culminated today at Oconomowoc at the summer home of President A. J. Earling of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad by the marriage of George Kendall to Miss Isabella G. Carpenter, daughter of the late A. V. H. Carpenter, for many years general passenger agent of the same road says the Chicago Record-Herald.

Miss Carpenter is secretary to Third Vice President Hilland, Geo. Kendall is at present a passenger conductor on the Council Bluffs division of the road, running between Chicago and Marion, Iowa. Rumor has it that the two have been sweethearts for fifteen years or more. Miss Carpenter said yesterday: "I have known Mr. Kendall almost all my life, but I never thought of marrying him until about a year ago."

Last May Mr. Kendall was taken seriously ill, and it is said that Miss Carpenter helped to nurse him back to health. But she says, "Nonsense, he was ill, but he went to a health resort and got well." At any rate Mr. Earling who was a close friend of Miss Carpenter's father, and who has taken considerable interest in the matter, has asked them, now that the date is set, to be married at Oconomowoc, and they went there together this morning.

Miss Carpenter lives in the Brewster apartment house, Diversey boulevard and Surf street. Until Mr. Kendall was taken sick last May he had an apartment in the same building. The couple will make their home in Chicago.

Rock Island
A story that dealt with the recent purchase in Wall street dealt with the recent purchase of the Seaboard Air line by the Frisco-Rock Island interests. According to the story 240,000 shares of the Seaboard Air line common has been bought at 23 to allow the Seaboard people to dispose of their stock. A banker interested in the Seaboard deal, when this report was shown him, said:

"That is mere gossip and only guesswork on the part of somebody, and has as much foundation as other guesses. I won't say whether the story is true or not, but I do say it is just gossip."

It was pointed out in support of the story that the Rock Island people might as well have had enough Rock Island common on hand to carry out such a deal, as is generally believed in the street. There has been no sufficient market for the stock received when the Rock Island company was organized. The street would like to know, however, where 240,000 shares of Seaboard could have been gathered together for the deal, since the outstanding stock of the system is only 290,000 shares.

JOHN BURNS, HERO OF GETTYSBURG

AUTHENTIC PORTRAIT OF THE WELL KNOWN CHARACTER.

PRINTED FROM PHOTOGRAPH

The Last Order of General Robert Lee is So Reproduced by Permission

Through the kindness of C. F. Lester we are today enabled to give the readers of the Gazette a picture of John Burns, the hero of Gettysburg and a short description of the man himself. Mr. Lester met him and knew him after the war and heard him tell the story of how he fought Lee's forces along side of a "Badger" regiment in that famous fight at Gettysburg in July of 1863. The high water mark of the rebellion has been called and this aged man was the only private citizen of the little Pennsylvania town who shouldered a musket and gave the grey coats ball after ball until he was shot down. Not once was he wounded but three times and when at the end of the first day's fighting the union army retired to the Cemetery behind the town he was left on the field where he fell.

Interesting Story
Mr. Lester has an interesting story to tell of his own army life and how he and his companions subsisted upon dry corn taken from a farmer's field for several days. He served with the Third Michigan cavalry enlisting from his home town, Michigan. He met John Burns in New York at the great Sanitary Fair held there and from him received the picture we have reproduced. Among the curiosities that Mr. Lester possesses is the mustering out orders of General Robert Lee to the Army of Virginia. This interesting document is dated April 10, 1865 at the headquarters of the army of the Northern Virginia and is known as general orders No. 9.

The Order.
"After four years of arduous service marked by unsurpassed courage and fortitude, the army of Northern Virginia has been compelled to yield to overwhelming numbers and resources.

I need not tell the brave survivors of so many hard fought battles who have remained steadfast to the last, that I have consented to the result from no distrust of them. But feeling that valor and devotion could accomplish nothing that could compensate for the loss that must have attended the continuation of the contest, I have determined to avoid the useless sacrifice of those whose past services have endeared them to their countrymen. By the terms of agreement officers and men are to return home, and remain until exchanged. You will take with you the satisfaction that proceeds from the consciousness of duty faithfully performed, and I earnestly pray that a merciful God will extend to you his blessings and protection. With an increasing admiration of your constancy and devotion to your country and a grateful remembrance of your kind and generous consideration for myself I bid you all an affectionate farewell.

Signed ROBERT LEE.

Other Papers.
Mr. Lester also has copies of the articles of surrender, the final order of Lieut. General U. S. Grant, and of General George Meade commanding the army of the Potomac. This order is dated June 28th and disbands the famous corps that saw so much fighting in the Virginia campaigns.

John Burns.
Perhaps the most satisfactory story of John Burns would be the one he tells of himself. It is in his own words and just as he would like to have it. It does not tell of his conversation with General Reynolds when he asked for a place to fight nor of his blue coat with long tails and how he stood the jibes of the soldiers as he fought on. That is all in the fiction of the story this is as John Burns himself tells it:

I was born in Burlington, New Jersey, on the 5th day of September, 1793. I served in the war of 1812. At the outbreak of the rebellion I went with Captain McPherson to Camp Wayne, Westchester, where I enlisted, but was discharged at the end of a fortnight on account of my age. I returned to Gettysburg (my home at that time), then went to Hagerstown and served as an assistant in the wagon camp for two weeks, after which as a teamster, I joined the three months boys under Patterson, with whom I remained a month. I then went to Frederick, and obtained the position of police officer in Gen. Bank's division. I was present at the battle of Edward's Ferry, and saw Col. Baker carried across the river. I remained with Gen. Banks for six months, and then returned home, where I was at the time of the battle of Gettysburg. On the first day of the fight I met General Reynolds, who had been out reconnoitering, and was asked to show him the Emmettsburg road. After doing this I obtained a musket from a soldier who had been wounded while on guard, and went off to the army to shoot some of the damned rebels." I fell in with a Wisconsin regiment and fought sometimes in line and sometimes on my own hook.

About 1 p. m., during an intermission, while lying in the woods I saw a Missouri man fall from the shot of a rebel concealed in the bushes. I stepped behind a tree and seeing the rebel about to reload, I shot him. I also shot a tremendous rebel who would not get out of my way. I myself received seven balls on the first day of the fight, the last of which wounded me severely in the leg. I laid on the field all night, and a rebel surgeon gave me water and a blanket. In the morning I crawled to a house nearby, and about 2 p. m., succeeded in being taken to my own house, which I found occupied by the rebels as a hospital. Their doctor dressed my wound. On Friday at 2 p. m., I was closely questioned by two rebel officers as to where I got my musket, what I said about the damned rebels, etc. I answered curtly, but confirmed their suspicions. They then went to a neighboring house, and shot at me as I lay on the sofa by the window, one of the balls whizzed near my head, another passing through the bed on the other side of the room. I was present at the dedication of Gettysburg cemetery where I received marked attention from the president, walked with me in the church.

Career of The "Iron Man"

Pitcher Joe McGinnity's Notable Feats of Endurance: How He Once Won a Twenty Inning Game: Gossip.

Joseph E. ("Iron Man") McGinnity of the New York National league baseball team is destined to rank as one of the best pitchers of the year. McGinnity has for several years enjoyed an enviable reputation as a twirler of unsurpassed endurance; hence his appellation, the "Iron Man," and this season he has eclipsed all records.

It was only recently that he pitched two games against Boston, in Boston, in a single afternoon and won them both. A few days later he repeated the performance against the heavy hitting Brooklyn, this time on the Giants' home grounds. Here is a feat unique in baseball annals and the "Iron Man" has been receiving a steady downpour of compliments, which he well deserves. Baseball sharps are still talking about the accomplishment and are waiting to see McGinnity turn the trick once again before the season closes.

It is conceded on all sides that McGinnity had proved his right to the title of the "Iron Man," bestowed on him when he pitched the Brooklyn club into the championship in 1900 by officiating in five games in six playing days. This happened when Pittsburgh was making a spurt that sent Bill Kennedy, Frank Klison and the other Brooklyn pitchers up in the air, where they remained until the "Iron Man's" willingness and gameness under fire brought them back to earth again.

The Pirates weakened under the strain, and the final weeks of the camheaders, winning one and losing the other each time.

How many players have survived the Brotherhood war of 1890 up to the present time? In the two big leagues the following men are playing who were in the speedy tribes of the old days: Lave Cross, Ryan, Kluttsch, Kid Gleason, Patsy Donovan, Van Halten, Burkett, Beckley, Daly and Dahlen.

Jack O'Connor, the veteran catcher, speaking of the late Ed Deleahanty, says: "If Del had a weakness at the bat I could never discover it. I remember one day the Clevelanders were playing at the Philadelphia grounds and we were one run ahead. There were two men on bases and Del came up. I told Cy Young to let him walk. Cy pitched one about two feet outside the plate and Del stepped back and clouted it. I think the ball landed somewhere in Fairmount park or some other corner of the Quaker town. Of course we lost the game and were all sore. 'I told you to let him walk,'

CHARLEY BENDER, THE INDIAN TWIRLER. Bender, of Connie Mack's Philadelphia Americans, is a full blooded Indian. He is doing good work in the box and has been signed for next season by the Athletics.

said I to Cy on the way to the hotel. 'Oh, I know you did,' said Cy, 'but I had to pitch the ball somewhere, and I thought I had made a wild pitch until I saw it going over the fence.'"

"Silk" O'Loughlin is a unique character in baseball. He is undoubtedly one of the best umpires in the country, even though he slips up on his decisions occasionally. His peculiar actions and calling of strikes and balls keep the crowds in a good humor, and when any trouble is brewing "Silk" is on the spot to take up his share of it.

It is noticeable that none of the rosy players takes many liberties with O'Loughlin, for he is quick as a flash in suppressing all players who violate the rules. "Silk" has been charged with drinking and carousing, when the fact is that he never drank intoxicating liquors in his life and does not carouse. When off duty he may be found at his hotel surrounded by a crowd of fans and friends, and he can entertain them with a fund of good stories.

Never was an umpire more fearless. One time a crowd in New England wanted to mob him, and some friends suggested that he return to his boarding place under the escort of the police. "Silk" said: "Not for me. The street cars are cool enough for 'Silk.'" And he cowed the entire crowd, which was amazed at his nerve and bravery and apparent unconcern.

Every now and then some old pitcher is "born again" and does wonderful work for a time. The last of these is "Roaring Bill" Kennedy, who is the most successful twirler of the Pittsburgh Pirates. It was believed that when his time with the Brooklyn expired he was "all in" so far as major league company was concerned.

Jimmy O'Rourke, the former Yale infielder, is now playing professionally with Bridgeport of the Connecticut league. It is one of the few instances on record where father and son have played on the same team, for the patriarchal Orator O'Rourke is manager and a member of the team.

When Roger Bresnahan of the New York Nationals goes to the ball field he seldom knows what position he is to play. Roger has tried about everything but umpiring. He is the best utility player in any league and seems to be familiar with all positions.

Noted Irish Hurdler.
Mee Kent, one of the best hurdlers in Ireland, will visit America this year and will take part in athletic meetings. Kent is a wealthy young Irishman, who is in the game for sport's sake alone.

Pulliam and Herrman.
President Pulliam and President Herrman recently had a little love feast in Cincinnati, and now it is believed there is a better understanding between the two National league officials.

The America's Cup.
The America's cup, first sailed for in 1851 in British waters, was offered for competition by the Royal Yacht squadron, and not by the late Queen Victoria, as many people suppose.

Speedy Dave Fultz.
Says a New York paper, "Dave Fultz of the Americans is the fastest man between first base and home seen around here this season with the possible exception of Sheekard."

Barr's Fortune.
Charley Barr, former captain of Columbia and now of Reliance, has laid away a snug fortune, as also have other skippers who have held the helm.

JOE MCGINNITY, THE "IRON MAN."

paign were a cake walk for Brooklyn. In the postseason series, played in Pittsburgh, McGinnity won the first game, with Rube Waddell opposed to him, and also won the final game that gave the champions the series. The handsome silver cup won by Brooklyn was turned over to McGinnity by his fellow players in appreciation of his splendid work during the season.

McGinnity began his professional career in 1897 with the Springfield (Ill.) club. In 1898 he helped Peoria win the Western association championship, and during that season pitched one of the most remarkable games in the history of baseball and the most sensational of his career. Peoria was playing St. Joseph, and at the end of the twentieth inning the score was 4 to 1. The Salts went to pieces in the twenty-first inning, and Peoria tallied four runs. The Salts, in their inning, made but one run.

McGinnity held his opponents down to eleven hits and in fielding made three put outs, ten assists and one error. From the fourth inning to the twentieth the Salts drew sixteen consecutive blanks.

George Pinckney, the old Brooklyn third baseman, recommended McGinnity very highly to President Ebbets of the Brooklyn club. When the Brooklyn and Baltimore were consolidated in 1899 John McGraw signed the "Iron Man" for Baltimore. McGraw and his supposed team of "dubs" set a hot pace for the National league that year, and McGinnity was the principal factor in the pitcher's box. He pitched in forty-five games, winning twenty-eight. His percentage of victories was .622, while Baltimore finished the season with .581 per cent.

In 1900, when the National league circuit was reduced, McGinnity was transferred to Brooklyn. In 1901 he signed with the Baltimore American

THE FAMILY BEER

Visitor: "Does your whole family drink beer?"

Host: "Just Schlitz beer—no other. Our physician says that Schlitz beer is good for them."

Visitor: "Why Schlitz beer and no other?"

Host: "Because Schlitz beer is pure. There are no germs in it. Schlitz beer is brewed in absolute cleanliness, and cooled in filtered air. The makers go down 1400 feet for the water they use in it. They filter the beer, then sterilize every bottle—by Pasteur's process—after it is sealed."

Visitor: "But beer makes me bilious."

Host: "Schlitz beer will not, that's another advantage. Biliousness is caused by 'green' beer—beer hurried into the market before it is sufficiently aged. Schlitz beer is aged for months in refrigerating rooms before it is bottled."

Visitor: "And what do you pay for it?"

Host: "Just what you pay for other beer. I secure the most careful brewing in the world for what you pay without it. I get a beer that costs twice as much as common beer in the brewing, by simply demanding Schlitz."

Visitor: "I'll do that next time."

Host: "Yes, and ever afterward. People are learning these facts, and Schlitz sales now exceed a million barrels annually. Ask for the brewery bottling."

HAY FEVER CONQUEROR

Breathe Hyomel and Escape This Dreaded Summer Visitor.
By the use of Hyomel, you can save an expensive trip to the mountains and escape weeks of suffering. This remarkable remedy for the cure of hay fever, kills the germs of the disease and breaks the irritated mucous membrane if used two or three weeks before the time of the usual appearance of hay fever will prevent the attack.

The complete Hyomel treatment consists of a neat pocket inhaler, through which Hyomel is breathed, a bottle of Hyomel and a medicine dropper. The air taken into the lungs in this way is filled with healing balsams and forms a perfect safeguard against attacks of hay fever or rose cold.

Those who have had hay fever, know how little help can be gained by stomach dosing in this disease. Hyomel is the only scientific yet common sense treatment for the trouble.

It is easy enough for one to say that a remedy will give satisfaction, but Peoples' Drug Co. offer to refund the money if Hyomel does not do all that is claimed for it, certainly inspires faith in the treatment.

Hyomel really gives you in your own home, a change of climate, and hay fever sufferers know from past experience that this has been the only thing that afforded them relief.

By breathing Hyomel a few times daily, you can save the expense and trouble of a mountain trip and avoid all danger of hay fever.

EVERY DAY TRAGEDIES.

A little lad, 7 years old was thrown from a boat that was struck by a steamer, a few days ago. His father and mother were with him and were rescued, but the little fellow was drowned.

The family was a happy family the moment before the accident, but the tragedy brought to the home the most bitter anguish, and the vision of the little life that struggled in the grasp of death, will haunt the memory for years to come.

The two young people, full of life and animation, stepped into a boat and drifted out with the wind until the waves engulfed them. One was the daughter in a home where her presence was like a ray of sunshine. The other, the son and support of an invalid mother.

They sailed away in a fall little bark, and landed without warning in eternity. A double tragedy, and the eyes are filled with tears as they look out over the sparkling water, and the hearts are burdened with sorrow while they pray that the deep may give up their dead.

In another home a mother well along towards the century mark, but with mind as active as in girlhood, is fighting step by step, with disease that holds her in relentless grasp. A daughter, who has been her constant companion for many years, is aroused by the sound of a fall in the early morning, and hastens to the adjoining room to find her mother dead. Another tragedy.

Only last Wednesday a mother who for half a century had presided in a home, noted for happiness and contentment, was stricken with disease in the morning, and in a few hours her spirit went out to the life beyond. The shock came to the home like a flash of lightning from a clear sky, and another tragedy is added to the long list of every day occurrences.

The experience of a week, within a limited radius, recorded these startling events, yet they are being repeated every day of the year. The death column of every journal bears the tidings and it is in daily demand. The bright summer days are noted for accidents, and the holiday frequently ends in tragedy.

Sudden death is always startling but it represents only one of many tragedies in every day life. There are homes in every community where death has been devastating for years and still the victim lives.

Two men were standing on a street corner, the other night, when one of them lifted his hat to a woman who passed. She was plainly clad, and as the light reflected on her face the lines care and trouble were not difficult to trace. One of the men had been away from the city or a number of years and said to his companion, "I ought to know that woman John, there's something about her that seems familiar, but I can't place her."

"Yes," John replied "You know her Tom a good deal better than I do, for she was your next door neighbor and playmate when we were boys, and you were in school together and graduated in the same class."

"What, you don't mean to tell me that that woman is Lilly Ward, the girl that used to be so sprightly, and full of fun, the girl that every body admired and that I was in love with twenty five years ago. I can't believe it John," and Tom turned to his friend and continued, "what sort of an experience has she had and what has produced the wonderful change."

"Oh the same experience that comes to many girls," John replied, "she married a worthless fellow, who was never able to support himself, and he has been a confirmed drunkard for twenty years. The oldest boy has taken the same route, and between the two the wife and mother has grown old before her time. She might better have died in girlhood and escaped the tragedy of a living tomb."

The two friends still stood on the corner, discussing old times, when half a dozen young men sauntered into a saloon across the way. "Do you know the crowd Tom said, Oh yes, they belong to our best families, and every last one of them has a good home, but they have reached the age of personal responsibility, and think it smart to take a drink, now and then. Two of the boys have an inherited appetite, and the others are doing their best to acquire one. If I had a boy like that I should want him to go and drown himself for his mother's sake. They must be a constant nightmare in the home."

While they were talking a couple of girls passed the corner for the third time evidently bent on a flirtation. As Tom noticed them he said, "I don't think the old town has improved very much during my absence. Out in my country these girls would be called reckless. Do you happen to know them, John?" "Yes, I have known them ever since they were children. In fact they attend my church, and are in my Sunday school. I have talked with their mothers about them and they are very much worried over their conduct, but they are beyond their control, and there is tragedy ahead of them, unless they reform."

There are many experiences in every day life that are worse than death, and they do not come from dissipation or recklessness. The heart that withers under the blighting influence of neglect dies by slow stages, and the lingering death is more pitiful than the sudden shock that startles in time of accident.

There are homes that are as destitute of love as they would be were the occupants strangers. The two lives that were united back in the years, and that were intended to be bound by golden cords until the compact was a perfect union, have drifted apart, and with the years have come separations.

There are no evidences that love ever existed in the home and the tragedy of blighted lives is a spectre that constantly annoys.

The important fact that the heart should never grow old, is too often overlooked. The ravages of time leaves an imprint on the face, and as age advances the step is less sprightly, but if the thoughtful courtesies of life have not been neglected the heart responds readily to their touch down to the edge of time.

Your wife's name was Mary, back in the years of her maidenhood, and when you spoke the name in tones of endearment the blush of pleasure brought roses to her cheeks and a smile that entranced you, but you have long since forgotten the name, and now you call her anything to attract attention.

There was a time when any sacrifice for her comfort was a pleasure but that was during the age of sentiment, when you kissed her good-bye in the morning, and she waited for you at the gate at the close of the day. If you should renew the practice, the neighbors might call you silly, but the wife is worth more to you than the neighbors, and she will forgive you.

That old couple going down the street, arm in arm, have tramped along the pathway together for 50 years. They look alike and act alike for they have carried out the solemn compact that made them man and wife. Some tragedies have come to their home and they are not strangers to sorrow, but their hearts are as young today as when they stood at the altar.

They represent a type of maturity all too rare, and yet they are journeying on the shady side, as God intended they should.

Some tragedies can not be avoided but many of them can be, and the responsibility that encourages them is always on the human side.

WHAT WILL THE COUNCIL DO?

The common council is asked by the Janesville Traction company to amend the franchise recently granted, and to amend it to such an extent that it would hardly be recognized by either the parties interested or the general public. "What will the council do," in the matter, is a question that is being liberally discussed.

The history of the Madison franchise is now of such recent date that it is fresh in the minds of the people. Two companies competed for the favor. One was represented by Janesville capitalists and business men, who were willing to comply with every requirement demanded by the city, and who were equipped with a contract signed by Chicago capitalists, to furnish all the money necessary to complete the enterprise.

The other was promoted by the Janesville Traction company, and for some reason only known to the council, this company was favored. It was said that the home company never intended to use the franchise if they secured it, and that they only wanted it for speculative purposes. It was also argued that the money could not be produced. There seemed to be no question about the sincerity of ability of the Janesville Traction company.

The concessions now asked by that organization, furnish food for thought, and the council will make no mistake by taking time to consider what these concessions mean. They mean the yielding of many points that were considered vital and the indefinite postponement of the enterprise.

The Gazette has no interest in the Madison Interurban line, except in so far as it may benefit the city. The paper felt that the council made a mistake in turning down the home company, because it believes that home enterprises should be encouraged. If the restrictions thrown about the franchise sixty days ago, were vital, they are just as important today. It is a good time to go slow and consider.

St. Louis is getting ready for the Louisiana Purchase exposition by burning up all its old buildings.

It would be too bad if the Chicago post office should be finished within the next year or two.

Those Fumblers seem to be having a big time over on the other side showing up how foolish some of the money lenders were to give them coin without any good security.

Secretary Root has gone to England and incidentally he will attend the meeting of the Alaskan Boundary commission.

BEET SUGAR FROM JANESVILLE BEETS

J. A. Decker Has Grown a Fine Crop of the Genuine Sugar Beet, and Will Send Exhibit.

On the Milton avenue farm of J. A. Decker are several acres of the finest sugar beets raised in Rock county this year, and for that reason Mr. Decker has been asked to prepare an exhibit to be sent to the central offices of the Wisconsin sugar company at Menominee Falls, where tests will be made to determine the sugar percentage, the tonnage to the acre, and other points which will aid in determining the success of Rock county as a beet growing locality.

In addition to shipping to the sugar factory several of the beets, which are unusually large and well formed, Mr. Decker will furnish photographs to illustrate other features in connection with beet sugar industry in southern Wisconsin. Photographs are now being prepared which will show the field of sugar beets, and indicate the healthy condition of the plants.

FOOTBALL GOSSIP FROM MADISON

GENERAL TALK OF UNIVERSITY TEAM'S PROSPECTS. — GREAT THINGS ARE EXPECTED

Coach McCarthy Says This Year Will Be a Good One for Players.

The date for the opening of football practice at Wisconsin has been changed to a week earlier than first announced, and Monday, Sept. 7, is now the day fixed for the candidates to be on hand for the opening practice.

While only six or seven of the members of last year's team will be back, prospects were never better for a promising lot of new material. Manager Kilpatrick has put in the greater part of last month or six weeks in scouring the northwest for football material, while Coach Curtis and Capt. Abbott have also done considerable missionary work. As a result a number of young men who have made good records on their high school and academy football teams have been persuaded to come to Wisconsin, and while they have still to "make good" in fast company, most of them look promising, and there are a few heavyweights in the number who will tip the scales at from 184 to a little over 200 pounds.

The Old Men
Members of last year's team who will be back are Capt. Abbott and Bush, ends; Fogg, quarterback; Berthke, guard; Brindley, guard; Findlay, who will probably try for tackle; Vanderboom, half back; Remp who started at tackle but was injured early in the season, and Marsh, substitute half back, will also be back. The best of last year's second team who will be here include Churchill, guard; Cecil Schreiber, quarterback; Bartlett, end and half back; and Wabret, half back. Bain, the Indian half back who played with the Haskell team, has been here most of the summer, and with Findlay and Bartlett has been getting a little preliminary training in punting the ball from Assistant Coach McCarthy. Bain is a stocky fellow, weighs 184 pounds stripped, is fast on his feet, and is a promising man for the much-needed back field.

The revised schedule just announced by Manager Kilpatrick, includes nine games, all but three of which will be played at home. It opens Oct. 3 with Northwestern college at Naperville, Ill. The first "big" game is with Chicago, at Madison, Oct. 31. The Michigan game will be played at Ann Arbor, Nov. 14, the Minnesota game at Milwaukee Thanksgiving day, and the Northwestern game at Evanston the Saturday previous. The complete schedule is as follows:

The Schedule
October 3—Northwestern college at Naperville, Ill., at Madison.
October 10—Lawrence university at Madison.
October 17—Beloit college, at Madison.
October 24—Knox college, at Madison.
October 31—Chicago university, at Madison.
November 7—Oshkosh Normal, at Madison.
November 14—Michigan, at Ann Arbor.
November 21—Northwestern, at Evanston.
November 28—(Thanksgiving day) Minnesota, at Milwaukee.

The Prospects
In speaking of the prospects Assistant Coach McCarthy says: "Because Wisconsin had an off season last year, we will try all the harder for a strong team this year, and the outlook is good from the present point of view. Wisconsin's average since she began playing football is better than that of any other western teams, all of her games lost having been by narrow margins, and we're going to do our best to at least keep up the average this year."

REVOLVER CAUSED BIDWELL'S DEATH

Local Relatives Receive Details of Accidental Killing — Leaves Wife and Two Children.

Local relatives have received the following details regarding the death of Henry L. Bidwell, formerly of this city:
Clark Fork, Idaho, Aug. 18.—Henry Bidwell, the prominent and well known justice of the peace of Hope, Idaho, accidentally shot himself here last evening about six o'clock while waiting for the passenger train to return to his home.

He had been summoned here to hold an inquest over the body of James McGinn, who was supposed to have been run over by a train three miles east of here early Sunday morning. After performing the duties of the coroner he went to the station and while there and extra freight came along taking the siding for an eastbound passenger train. While talking and joking with the engineer, with whom he was well acquainted, Bidwell reached in his inside pocket for something and upon withdrawing his hand his revolver went off killing him instantly. The bullet passed through his body above the heart and lodged under his shoulder blade. A physician was summoned immediately, but the victim was dead before the doctor arrived.

LINE OF PARADE IS FIXED UPON

LADIES WILL LEAD LABOR DAY MARCH.

UNION MEN TO THE LINE CITY

Will Form at the Court House and March to Northwestern Depot, Where Train Leaves.

Union men in Janesville will be considerably scarcer on September seventh than the proverbial hen's teeth, said a prominent exponent of organized labor this morning. Committees in charge of the labor day celebration have done their work well, and two weeks in advance of the gala day they are able to announce that all plans are made, and everything will go with clock-like smoothness. Beloit will be the rallying point for union men of Janesville, Rockford, and other surrounding points.

Parade Forms Here
At nine o'clock in the morning the labor unions of the city will form their parade, preparatory to taking a special train for the Line City. The train leaves the North-Western depot at ten o'clock, the round trip tickets being made out so that excursionists who desire to remain in Beloit until the following day can do so.

So many trains run from Beloit to this city during the day that no special has been arranged for, making it possible for the crowd to return at any time that is most convenient.

Unions All n Line
The line of march will be from the courthouse park to the depot, the organizations lining up in the following order:

Woman's Union Label league in carriages; ladies of different unions in carriages; Federated Trades Council, three abreast, each line representing one union. Carpenters; Cigar-makers, Sheet Metal Workers; Machinists; Tailors; Typographical; Woodworkers; Brewers; Bartenders; Plumbers; Painters; Barbers; Retail Clerks; Leather Workers; Boot and Shoe Workers; No. 340; Teamsters; Laborers; and Bricklayers and Masons.

This will give a total of twenty-two divisions to the parade.

VERY QUICK WORK SAVED THE COAT

W. C. Oviatt Lost His Overcoat, and Officer Beneke Captured the Man Last Night.

Yesterday afternoon W. C. Oviatt of Milton Junction telephoned down to Officer Brown that an overcoat had been stolen from him and that he suspected a printer who he had working for him as being the thief. Later in the evening Officer Beneke received a fairly good description of the alleged thief and this morning at four he arrested him at the corner of the Myers house with the coat on his arm. The prisoner gave his name as Mike Dempsey and said he was a printer by trade. He was about fifty years old. This morning Mr. Oviatt arrived in the city and fully identified the coat as belonging to him. He was unwilling to prosecute the man and offered to help him find work if he was released. This was done and the man went to Evansville where a place is waiting him.

In "The Fatal Wedding," which comes to the Myers Grand, Monday, Aug. 24, the theatergoers of this city will get something out of the ordinary run of comedy dramas. The piece which has just finished a successful run in New York city, proved its drawing powers by playing to crowded houses during its engagement in the metropolis. The plot of "The Fatal Wedding" is entirely different from anything before seen, and serves to introduce a well told story, full of heart interest and pathos, and one that appeals strongly to the feminine portion of the theater going public. Yet there is sufficient comedy introduced into the play to keep the audience in a happy frame of mind throughout the performance. Scenes and incidents of real happenings in the great metropolis are vividly shown and truthfully portrayed.

The thousands of readers of Quincy Adams Sawyer will be interested to know how the novel has been utilized for stage purposes and what scenes serve as backgrounds for these honest country people to show us their simple everyday lives. The first act shows the interior of Benoit Hill's grocery store, including the village post office at Mason's Corner where for one thing the scrimmage between Quincy Adams Sawyer and the town bully, Bob Wood, takes place. Act II, has two scenes, the first of which represents the crossroads between Eastborough and Mason's Corner and the second the sitting room at the Putnam farm. The third act is the Pettingill farm-yard where the famous husking bee in the great barn is shown. The first scene of the fourth act shows the exterior of the Pettingill homestead during a rousing New England snowstorm, and the second scene pictures the Pettingills' cosy living room.

The sun has set, at least temporarily, upon the reign of the "Floradora" show girl of the Maude Berli type, so comes the word from Rialto. The chorus maiden of Junoesque proportions is to be supplanted by the "peewees" and "broilers," as the New York managers have chosen to characterize the dainty misses of which the arbiters of theatrical affairs give for the fall from grace of the Gibson girls who can set off stunning gowns to perfection sounds at least worthy of consideration. They say that while the Junos are magnificent sights to gaze upon they can rarely sing or dance, and this season's pieces rely upon that sort of thing for success.

"Peggy from Paris," which has been in Boston all summer, at the Tremont theater, reached its 100th performance on Aug. 6. Chicago

LAW DECISIONS FOR LAYMEN

Recent Court Rulings That Will Interest the Busy Reader Very Much.

Intoxicating Liquors. It is no defense to an action against a liquor dealer for selling liquor to plaintiff's minor son that plaintiff did not object to others selling to him, though this may be admissible to corroborate the dealer's testimony that the father consented to the sale. What a minor, when purchasing liquor, said as to his father's consent to such sale to him, is not admissible in an action by the father against the liquor dealer for making the sale. 75 Southwestern Rep. (Texas, Judge Stephens) 933.

Sunday Law. A city ordinance which makes it unlawful for any person to keep an open business house on the sabbath day, with a provision that nothing therein shall prevent the sale of drugs on that day, does not prohibit business where drugs and other articles are sold, and whose business and ordinary calling is the selling of such goods, from keeping such place open on the Sabbath for the purposes of selling drugs, in cases where such sales would be authorized under the laws of the state. 45 Southeastern Rep. 65.

Bank Insolvency. The United States circuit court of appeals of the third circuit held in the case of Earle vs. Carson, that a holder of stock in a national bank who, without knowledge or suspicion that the bank is insolvent or is likely to prove so, sells the stock, and who does everything reasonable possible to procure transfer of the shares on the books of the bank, is not liable as a stockholder although the bank is declared insolvent before the transfer is effected, and the bank and the publisher are insolvent when the sale is made.

Postmasters. Under the settled law that a postmaster is liable on his bond for stamps and money order funds received by him and not accounted for, although they may have been lost through burglary, and without fault or negligence on his part, a postmaster is not relieved from such liability by the fact that the United States furnished the building and the safe therein, both of which he was required to use, and from which the property was taken by the burglars. 122 Federal Rep. (Kentucky, Judge Evans) 962.

Damages. An award of $12,000 made to a plaintiff, who was a successful veterinary surgeon, 23 years old, with a practice worth $3,000 a year, for an injury received while a passenger on defendant's vessel, by which his skull was crushed, necessitating a surgical operation for which he was charged $2,000, confining him to his bed for several months, and leaving him permanently paralyzed and incapacitated for the work of his profession, and with an open wound in his head, was not excessive. 122 Federal Rep. (Virginia, Judge Wadsworth) 83.

Anti-Trust Law. The U. S. circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit held, in the recent case of Gibbs vs. McNeely, that a combination of the manufacturers of the product of a state, the market for four-fifths of which is found in other states, to limit production and raise the price is a violation of the anti-trust law of July 2, 1890.

TO START SEASON IN JANESVILLE

"Fatal Wedding Company" Comes Here Direct from New York for Initial Performance.

Janesville has been singled out for the first western performance of this fall of "The Fatal Wedding." The company which is to appear at the Myers Grand Monday night will arrive in this city tonight direct from New York where they have closed a run which is said to have been a record breaker in the history of the melodramatic stage.

The Sabbath will not be a day of rest for the company. In preparation for the opening of their western tour they will be obliged to spend the greater part of tomorrow in the opera house, polishing and re-polishing the refractory lines. The same process will be repeated the following day, and on Monday evening the curtain will rise on the sensational Gottman play which has been acclaimed one of the greatest works of its kind by the stony hearted critics of the New York dailies.

Several first performances, or nearly first performances are among the bookings at the Grand. "The Royal Slave" was given almost its first performance of the fall here, and the same is true of "Hello, Bill!" "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," with which the regular season at the Grand begins, will open its season at Racine on the evening previous to its engagement here.

Serofula, salt rheum, erysipelas and other distressing diseases yield quickly and permanently to the cleansing, purifying power of Burdock Blood Bitters.

Bodily pain loses its terror if you've a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil in the house. Instant relief in cases of burns, cuts, sprains, accidents of any sort. "I had a running, itching sore on my leg. Suffered tortures. Doan's ointment took away the burning and itching instantly and quickly effected permanent cure." C. W. Lenhart, Bowling Green, O.

SPANISH PEGGY

A STORY OF YOUNG ILLINOIS

By MARY HARTWELL CATHERWOOD

Copyright, 1930, by Herbert S. Stone & Co.

CHAPTER VI.

"I not believe you!" said Antywine. "You ask them Rutledges, then, that was hired to take such fine care of her! Why don't you go and ask them?"

"I not believe you!" trembled Antywine. He sat down on the doorstep holding his blinded head between his hands.

"You and Peggy thought you would go to yourselves, didn't you? But she lays in Concord burying-ground now, right alongside of Shickshack; and you know where he lays. The new grave's there."

"I not believe you! I not believe you! I not believe you!"

Antywine leaped from the doorsill and ran like a deer to the tavern, passing the young men and the oxen without noticing or hearing them. Ann Rutledge was sewing by an open window with her back toward him. The two young girls were in the garden with their mother. He did not see Peggy anywhere. A hush was upon the house, and as Ann turned and saw him with a frightened look on her face, he could not ask any question, but took the path down to Rock creek, and ran to the stone where Peggy used to hide her book for him. The sun was down and a ribbon of mist hovered in front of the closed schoolhouse.

Nobody would ever wait for him at that rock again. He ran along the ravine below the gardens and returned to his house, barring the door and drawing the latch-string in. Lying on the floor in the darkest corner, he hid his weeping, and made no answer to the young men, who called his name through the window.

Sally was asleep in her own cabin long before Antywine crept out of his and took the road to Concord burying-ground. It was a long walk under blurred stars, for the wind changed after midnight, belying the promise of a fair sunset.

Antywine tried to bring Peggy's face before him, with its many fitting expressions. Her eyes were hazel, or black, or gray, by changeable turns, swarming with points of light. He remembered drinking from the gourd after her, on the very side where she had drunk, and the pleased trembling of her lips when she noticed it. All the ways and traits which went to the making of the companion he called sweetheart were present to his mind, when peeping among saplings in the thinly populated burying-ground he came to Shickshack's sunken grave which he had himself helped to make, and found a fresh clay hillock beside it.

The latter part of the night rain poured upon the chest of drawers which Antywine had left standing in front of the cabin and streamed down its polished sides. Rain beat upon Antywine through sapling boughs, saturating his linen hunting-shirt and darkening his worn buckskins.

Drenched grass and a tangle of little trees he scarcely felt or saw when sodden and miserable daylight came. By the end of the afternoon some light crept out from sunset, and there was a clearing up in the west. Lincoln climbed the burying-ground fence, and found Antywine lying asleep across the new-made grave. He was so ghastly that Lincoln at once shook him, feeling relieved when he opened his eyes.

The boy looked up at the mole like a warm pulsing heart on his friend's cheek. But his friend's eyes twinkled. "What are you doing here on old Daddy Cameron's grave, Antywine?"

Antywine sprang as from a rattlesnake. He was exhausted, so that Lincoln gave him both hands to help him rise.

"Daddy Cameron died last week and they buried him in the same row with Shickshack. He was a fine old man, but if I were you I wouldn't lie out all night and all day on his grave!"

"Sally have tell me this is where she is bury!"

"Who? Peggy?"

"Yes, Sally. Where is she?"

"At the tavern."

"She is not dead?"

"Not a bit!"

"But Sally have tell me—"

"Haven't you summered and wintered Sally long enough to know when she is paying you a grudge?"

"But I run to the tavern myself—"

"And scare Ann, and run away again without asking any questions. I've had a long jaunt through the mud and searched the better part of a day for you."

Antywine threw his arms around Lincoln and sobbed and laughed like a woman. He awayed, and could scarcely stand.

"You've made yourself sick being so downhearted when you ought to have kept your wits. That Lorimer fellow is back at the Grove again, and he's making a bold stand now. If he had known I carry that snakeskin I reckon he would have followed our chain. But Dick Yates is here. We tried to find you last night, and couldn't."

"I tell Sally I not believe her!"

shivered Antywine.

"And then you leg it out here and pass a sentimental night and a watery day on Daddy Cameron's grave! I'm surprised at you!"

The American way of joking over what had been tragedy seemed delicious to the Canadian boy as he tramped back the long seven miles.

When he reached his house at the end of the village Lincoln did not think it advisable to take him any farther. Antywine was so ill that he lay down upon the floor, resisting any suggestion of food.

Through delirious eyes he saw the blaze, which Lincoln contrived to start in the chimney. Interlaced sticks piled there months before in readiness for a first house-warming.

Lincoln was on his knees blowing it when he heard Slickly Green pant through the door:

"Are you here, Abe? You're wanted at the tavern."

"What's the matter at the tavern?"

The Grove boys are coming to throw everything out of doors if you don't give that Lorimer man the Spaniard and her money."

"How do you know?"

"Martha Bell Clary slipped off on her father's horse and brought word."

"Where's Dick?"

"He's looking somewhere else for you."

Lincoln stood up and glanced at Antywine, who had suffered, but was unable to fight, resting like a log at the hearth corner.

"Poor Antywine!" he whispered, and carefully shut the door as he went out to settle the unconscious boy's fate.

The self-appointed censors of the Grove had once waked a store in New Salem, and kicked the merchandise about the street. The population of the village was about 100 souls, few of whom could be mustered as fighting men; while the Grove males were all fighting men.

The night was stormy and cloudless, but there was no moon. Dull panes of oiled paper revealed candles in some houses, but a hush like expectation seemed to stretch along the unseen windings of the street. When the Grove boys mounted for a raid of any sort they usually rode at full gallop, yelling like Indians. Lincoln was ahead of Slickly Green in the race to the tavern, when both stopped, halted by a procession with lanterns. There had been no noise of shouting, and no crash of destruction. The quiet approach of the company seemed worse than its ordinary rioting.

"They didn't stop at the tavern!"

whispered Slickly Green.

They had been to the tavern, for Dick Yates, bareheaded, was leading them peacefully away from it, walking in front of the cavalcade; and a girl's figure could be discerned sitting upon a led horse. The velvet dust of a village road muffled the tread of hoofs. But along house fronts on each side, where footpaths were marked by daily use, sounded the uneven patter of many feet. Men, women and children of New Salem, suffered to witness what they could not prevent, were hovering around Lincoln and the little Spaniard. He thought he saw Ann Rutledge, in her short-sleeved house dress, her face showing white and anxious through the dark; and Minter Grayham, whose haggardness and puny strength the Grove boys would have laughed at if opposed to them.

"Here is Abe Lincoln," announced Yates; and as if he had given a command to halt, the company halted.

"Here I am," said Lincoln. "Do you want me?" Dick and Slickly stood beside him in the middle of the road. "My friends and I" spoke a voice with a foreign accent, "have an affair of two minutes with you. You have somewhere a snakeskin purse belonging to my cousin, Consuelo Lorimer. Bring it and you shall not be injured."

"But if I did she'd be injured!"

"Don't let them take me, Mr. Lincoln!" besought Peggy from the midst of the riders. "I will not go! Where's Antywine?"

"Boys, you ought to be ashamed of yourselves!"

"We didn't come out for a speech, Abe," mocked Redmond Clary.

"And I'm not practicing polemics."

"You get the girl's money and hand it over."

"You let her out of that gang."

The gang growled.

"We have a crowd and you have just two backers. New Salem people can't do anything. We don't want to hurt you, Abe! unless we have to."

"String him up like a horsethief!" cried a man at the rear.

"Are you going to hand over the Spaniard's money?"

"No, I'm not," replied Lincoln.

"Ride him down!" cried another, and the horses were spurred forward.

Some women and children shrieked in fright as the three young fellows were driven in retreat to Antywine's cabin and sprang upon the chest of drawers. Standing close together with that short rostrum under their feet, they faced about the ring of horsemen who drew up around them. The perforated tin lanterns showered drops of yellow light on trampled grass. Behind the men's heads and shoulders were a void of trees and the starlit sky, and the excited murmur of New Salem. Lincoln towered in the midst of the circle.

He could dimly see the Spanish girl, and he remembered for one instant how Antywine lay exhausted within the cabin. She was looking for the last time at what was to have been her home, and wondering, with an ache of grief worse than her terror of the ruffians, what had become of the gentle housemate who had never before failed to take her part.

"Now men, listen to me one minute," exclaimed Dick Yates.

"We're not here to listen," ruled the leader.

"These boys ought to be put out," one man insisted. "We don't want them."

"Let my cousin's property be restored to her," spoke Pedro Lorimer, "without delay."

"And who are you?" demanded Yates, the beauty of his rosy youth, which had been felt rather than seen, changing suddenly to the power of a man with irresistible magnetism. His voice rolled out across the wall of rough faces. His eyes had scathing lights. His unwilling listeners raised their lanterns to look at him. "I have been gathering facts about you for more than a year. You are a New Orleans gambler. You ply your trade under cover of some political scheme about Cuba, a place you never saw. All you want of the poor young girl sitting on the horse beside you, is the handful of money her father contrived to hide from you. You think it is a very large sum. It is about two thousand dollars. If it hadn't been for poor old Shickshack you would have robbed her long ago. You paid Shickshack's half crazy, avaricious wife to send you word where he could be found, every time he moved to get rid of you."

"These men wouldn't send a child as helpless as one of their own sisters with you, if they knew you. You play the grandee before them. And in the west we always have backed a man up in taking his own when his rights were denied. But the only right you have in this community is to be dipped in the Sangamon!"

Lincoln, who had seen a knife thrown at Antywine's head for fewer words, kept his eye guarding the indistinct movements of the Spaniard. An uneasy tremor ran around what had been a dead wall of antagonism. But unfortunately Mahala Cameron's father now lifted his voice from the back ground, and in the character of minister exhorted Redmond Clary to draw his followers homeward and cease abetting the ungolly. Redmond Clary turned on him and told him to go home himself, or he might be neatly laid beside his daddy in the Concord burying-ground.

One word had swiftly followed another while Lincoln gauged the force drawn around him. His hair was ruffled over the arch of his head. His strong nose and clean-cut neck and the outward curving of his lips showed by fitful light above his shorter companions. Some radiation from his personality made one of the men exclaim:

"Abe, we know you're honest. But if you're too stubborn to hand over that money we've got a barrel at the mill all ready to roll you into the river."

"Wait!" said Lincoln, stretching out a long fore finger.

Pedro Lorimer hissed at him: "I do not wait while boys practice speeches! I could myself in return call my enemies names. This is not what was promised me."

"What Red Clary promised you," stated Lincoln with intuition which amounted to knowledge, "was if you would cancel his gambling debts he would make me hand over the little Spaniard's money."

Redmond Clary flung himself off his horse and ran at his accuser. The time for words was past. If the figure towering above them all had stood with less assurance, the raging leader might have led his mob to a cruel murder. But Lincoln's humorous eye spread a contagion of smiles as he caught the bull-bodded clump of the Grove by the collar and flung that muscular bulk across the ring to cool.

There was to be a fight. The men drew deep inhalations of enjoyment. For ever since Abraham Lincoln appeared in New Salem they had wanted to see him matched with Red Clary. Lincoln knew he was about to succeed or fail with the only argument which could move those to whom might was right. Eloquent and convincing words had to be backed by a man who could master his listeners. He was tired and superfluous. The Spanish girl leaned down on her horse's neck, unconsciously uttering prayers aloud for her champion. The struggle would be over in a few minutes, but if Red Clary whipped him her future lay in unknown and terrible places. That Antywine was missing seemed a token that the worst must be in store for her. She was in the grip of an evil force.

Both men threw off their roundabouts and vests. Lincoln faced his two companions, making them a screen, and hurriedly unfastened the belt of gold which he wore under his shirt, and put it in his hat. This he gave to Slickly Green, who held it, while Yates stood guard.

"You were cut out for a banker, Slicky," said Lincoln. "I wasn't. I might burst the snakeskin and spill the money."

His opponent rushed at him like a mastiff let loose, and Peggy doubled herself lower upon the horse's neck. She heard the impact of blows, which sent shudder after shudder down her body, and the panting of spent breath. The Grove boys set up a yell, and she stuffed the horse's mane into her ears. The big muscular bully who had made everybody in the Sangamon country afraid of him, and shaped public opinion for the Grove, was taking some cruel advantage of a clean wrestler, unused to sledge-hammer brutality. Then a hush penetrated even the horsehair, and Peggy looked as Lincoln knocked Red Clary flat beneath the chin of a startled animal. He fell against its hoofs, and being pulled into the clear space by one of his friends, lay still.

"I reckon," said Lincoln, pulling his own shirt collar wider open, and sitting on the chest of drawers to breathe. "he has the wind knocked out of him."

"Goody!" Peggy's own cry of thanks, giving was the first sound heard by the vanquished man: He sat up, blinking at those who had seen him humbled.

Lincoln bent over until his body described a right angle, and shook one long horizontal arm at the unimpaired jury who would have to render verdict in this first case which Yates and he had associated themselves to win.

"A boy," he panted, "is like a white dress: soil him, and he can be washed and made clean again. But a girl is like a glass bottle: if you let her fall, or throw her down and break her, she is broken forever. Now, men, are you determined to have this poor little bottle destroyed?"

There is often speech where there is no language heard; and Pedro Lorimer knew he stood by himself from that instant.

He spurred his horse toward Slickly to seize the bat and break away with it. But Antywine darted out of the cabin and across the open space like a stroke of light, intercepting the Spaniard. His eyes large with fever, and his high features impassioned, he had almost the beauty of an apparition. As the two encountered, Antywine seized the horse's bit and jerked it to its haunches. He and Pedro Lorimer stared at each other. Before the rider found his balance again Lincoln asked with whimsical significance:

"Boys, how would any of you like to get up out of chill-and-fever, and find all Clary's Grove helping a stranger rob you of your own dear gal?"

A sympathetic and sheepish grin seemed to relax as much as could be seen of every rude face; and Pedro Lorimer, throwing away caution, spurred over Antywine. The boy fell, and leaped up, understanding it was a struggle for Peggy. A whirlpool of shouts and plunging horses, and men scrambling to mount, drove all watchers back. Even Redmond Clary's voice was heard, denouncing the man whose part he had taken. The crowd that had come down New Salem street seeking Lincoln went back driving Pedro Lorimer.

"AND LOOK OUT FEARFULLY FOR A DREADED FACE."

Horrified as New Salem people were by threatened violence, they were unable to refrain from cheering. They crowded to the chest of drawers, where, left stranded as by a stormy tide, sat Peggy and Antywine. He held the hat and snakeskin which Slickly Green thrust into his keeping before following the ebb. The pair clung together, hearkening to no voices but their own, as two robins escaping from some peril of man, might have felicitated and comforted each other. The air was fresh like the breath of the sea after a hot land breeze has gone by.

Mounted all three upon the horses from which Lincoln had flung Peggy to Antywine, Lincoln and Yates, and Slickly filling his back from mane to tail, made the best haste they could to the Sangamon. They stood at the top of the terraced bank while Pedro Lorimer was rolled down in a barrel.

Three times, tradition has it, the unhappy wretch took his plunge, and came bobbing up like a buoy. Then Lincoln and Yates, and the cooling effect of the water on those who had him to pull out, succeeded in moderating popular rage against him. He was turned loose, and his horse whipped in the direction of Springfield, with emphatic assurance that the barrel would be kept for him, and if he ever came back would be put to its final use as his floating coffin.

Don Pedro Lorimer was never seen again in that country. When Peggy and Antywine were married, and keeping house in their own cabin, she used sometimes to part her white curtains at night, and look out fearfully for a dreaded face. But happiness and security became a habit, and she loved after awhile to tell her own story.

Years later the two who had steered her destiny—Abraham Lincoln and Richard Yates—began to steer the destinies of a nation and a state, and the Spaniard of New Salem grew to experience the grateful awe of a person who has been visited unawares by strong angels.

THE END.
Painter or House Owner.
Letter to Mr. W. Quill, Janesville, Wis.,

Dear Sir: There was a time when I paid a painter to paint lead and oil, and fight shy of anything else. That was when the market was full of poor paints, and zinc was unknown.

Now zinc has come in, and oil must go away—it is too short lived. There are two ways to use zinc: you can mix it in with lead in a tub, or buy Devco Ready Paint, which is ground by machinery.

If you mix your own lead and zinc, you gain something; if you buy Devco you gain more, because machinery does better work than hand mix-
